A partner and member of Kilpatrick Stockton's Intellectual Property Practice Group, Mr. Godlewski specializes in patent litigation and has acted as first chair counsel in both Markman hearings and patent trials before juries and the bench since 1994. Prior to joining his firm, he was a trial attorney with an Ohio patent firm and served as the first law clerk for now-Chief Judge Paul R. Matia, U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Ohio (1991-1993). His experience includes representing Citigroup against Net MoneyIN in the District of Arizona defending against credit card authorization patents (resulting in 2002 dismissal of Citigroup from the multi-defendant action) and conducting direct and cross examination of witnesses during the 3-month bench trial in Smith & Nephew v. Synthes (resulting in finding of infringement under client's orthopedic patents). Mr. Godlewski's writings include "Expedited Patent Litigation: When Justice Delayed is Justice Denied" (Intellectual Property Today, May 2004) and "Rules for Managing IP after Enron" (www.managingip.com, November 2003; co-authored with Stacey Rabbino). He is a contributing author to Lawyer's Cooperative Federal Practice Guide, "Federal Civil Procedure and Practice During Trial" through the American Inns of Court. A former instructor/advisor in intellectual property at the University of Akron College of Law, Mr. Godlewski has spoken for ALI-ABA and other continuing legal education providers.
